Park for Fire Island

Establishment of Area as National Seashore Is Urged

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

Conservationists everywhere have been encouraged by Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall's continued support for the establishment of a Fire Island national seashore. This kind of preservation for the remaining undeveloped miles of Fire Island is an absolute necessity if this and future generations are to continue to enjoy one last appreciable stretch of unspoiled seashore in this area.

It has been noised abroad that Fire Island is not big enough to become a national park. A simple look at a World Almanac refutes this claim. There are existing national parks that are much smaller than Fire Island, such as Hot Springs National Park in Arkansas (989 acres) and Platt National Park in Oklahoma (912 acres). The acreage available for such use on Fire Island would make a national park there nearly half again as big as the one on St. John in the Virgin Islands.

Indeed, only allowing for the area from Fire Island's Sunken Forest Preserve — a remarkable botanical sanctuary — eastward to Moriches Inlet, here are nearly 20 unspoiled miles totaling some 7,500 acres (3,200 acres of dunes and vegetated area, plus wetlands and the beach itself) broken only by five small clusters of cottages. Some of this land, including the 75-acre Sunken Forest Preserve, is waiting to be given to the Federal Government as soon as the Department of the Interior has the authority to receive it for inclusion into a national park.

Meanwhile, every day of delay robs the public of a little bit more of Fire Island. Scores of houses are under construction on the island at this very moment. Whole new subdivisions are in the planning stage. Why, then, is Congress dragging its heels? Two bills have already been introduced by New York legislators to establish a Fire Island national seashore. Isn't it time that these bills had some support from the rest of our Congressional delegation?

HARRY GRAYSON.

BIG NURSING HOME TO RISE ON 96TH ST.

City Approves Project for 'Showcase' Care Center

By MURRAY ILLSON

A new nursing home described as a "showcase for the nation and the entire world" will be built here beginning early next year, it was announced yesterday.

Its plans, the first to be approved under the Department of Hospital's recently adopted code governing nursing homes, call for an indoor swimming pool and a chapel of all faiths. Rooms will be available for husband-and-wife occupancy.

The new home, to be called the Florence Nightingale Nursing Home, will rise on a 12,500-square-foot site on 96th Street between Lexington and Third Avenues.

The building, which will be 14 stories high, will cost $5 million and will have 407 beds. The average charge for patients will be $16 a day, according to an announcement by Charles E. Sigety, the principal owner and sponsor of the home.

Mr. Sigety, a former director of the State Housing Finance Agency and now in private law practice, said the designer of the new proprietary home was William N. Breger, chairman of the Department of Architectural Design at Pratt Institute.

Advances in Construction

According to Mr. Breger, the new home will be of reinforced steel and concrete, and when completed will be the largest in the city.

Mr. Sigety, who has lectured at the Columbia University School of Public Health and Hospital Administration, said that nearly one-third of the 16,000 existing nursing home beds were "considered unsatisfactory or unacceptable by the Health Department or by fire safety standards."

The 96th Street site was selected, it was said, because it not only is convenient to transportation, cultural, recreational and entertainment facilities, but also because it is within a radius of two miles of 12 hospitals with a total of 4,370 beds.

As for the name of the new home, Mr. Sigety observed that "the world remembers Florence Nightingale as an excellent, courageous nurse."

A spokesman for the Department of Hospitals said that the plans for the new home had been approved, but that the approval of the home itself would have to wait until construction was completed.

Families Are Relocated

Mr. Sigety said that 45 families in brownstone tenements now on the site had already been relocated and that 45 other families were waiting for other housing.

There now are 87 proprietary nursing homes in the city with a total of 8,558 beds. Since the new code was adopted last February, seven nursing homes with a total of 277 beds have been closed for code violations. The code imposed more stringent requirements for safety in nursing homes and for standards of facilities and staff.

The largest nursing home now in the city, a Hospital Department spokesman said, is the Village Nursing Home at 607 Hudson Street, with 328 beds.

Rev. Dr. Samuel Shoemaker Dies; Pittsburgh Episcopal Canon, 69

Ex-Rector of Calvary Here
Was a Fiery Orator and Author of 25 Books

Special to The New York Times

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1—The Rev. Dr. Samuel Moor Shoemaker, honorary canon to the Ordinary of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Pittsburgh, died yesterday in Union Memorial Hospital in nearby Stevenson. He was 69 years old.

He was rector of the Calvary Episcopal Church in New York City from 1925 to 1951.

Surviving are his widow, the former Helen Dominick Smith, daughter of former Senator H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey; two daughters, Helen Dominick and Mrs. Sally Falls Robinson; a sister, Mrs. Bartlett F. Johnston; and four grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held Monday at 2 P. M. in St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Garrison Forest, Md.

Preached All Over

Dr. Shoemaker did not confine his preaching to his church. He would mount a box on a street corner if he thought he could bring religion into someone's life. And he often did.

Years after a young clergyman's zeal might have been expected to diminish, he went to country clubs and steel plants to preach.

A stockily built ruggedly handsome man, Dr. Shoemaker delivered his sermons with an evangelistic fervor, his blue eyes flashing but his voice surprisingly gentle. In addition, he was a prolific writer, with more than 25 books published. He was also heard regularly on radio for many years.

Dr. Shoemaker, who was born in Baltimore on Dec. 27, 1893, received his B.A. degree from Princeton University in 1916. He often went back to the university to preach and liked to discuss religion with college students.

He received his D.D. degree from Virginia Theological Seminary and his S.T.D. degree from Berkeley Divinity School in 1948. He was ordained a deacon in the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1920. At the age of 35, he became rector of Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and 21st Street.

To those who attended his church, it became quite apparent that Dr. Shoemaker was not entirely satisfied with the attitudes of many parishioners or with many clergymen. Of the latter he said in 1926:

"The typical leaders of the church today are apt to be neither scholars nor missionaries but organizers, ecclesiastical bank presidents. The church has, to a large extent, succumbed to the wave of materialism which judges everything by size and quantity, instead of character and quality."

Headed 'Oxford Group'

In 1932, Dr. Shoemaker received a six-month leave of absence to help develop the so-called Oxford Group, one of the first moral-rearmament units headed by Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman. He spoke often about and for the group until 1941, when he concluded that the movement had become a "plain dictatorship" and in respect to the church, "divisive."

For four months during 1945, Dr. Shoemaker delivered a weekly sermon, titled "Your Life Today," over radio station WJZ in New York. Later he delivered two sermons a week over a network of 120 stations of the American Broadcasting Company. He was also heard on the Mutual Broadcasting System's "Radio Chapel" and "Faith in Our Time."

Among his books were "By the Power of God," "How to Become a Christian," and "How You Can Help Other People."

Dr. Shoemaker rarely lacked topics to speak on. In 1947 he criticized the new style of longer women's dresses.

"Christian women," he said, "ought to resist this miserable, selfish modern style of dresses as true sin—to what purpose these full, flapping, flowing garments now down to their ankles, when recently they were up to their knees, because some designer in Paris cracks the whip?"

He was also one of the early supporters of Alcoholics Anonymous in New York.

In the late nineteen-forties and early fifties, he spoke frequently on the menace of communism. He became a member of the board of directors of Common Cause, Inc., a citizens group designed to combat communism. He called on Christians to be pro-Christian rather than anti-Russian.

When he went to Pittsburgh in 1952, he immediately began to think of ways to get the steel industry "down on its knees in prayer."

He enlisted the strong support

Blackstone Studios

Rev. Dr. Samuel Shoemaker

of Admiral Ben Moreel, former chairman of the board of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation. Weekly lectures on religion were subsequently held in parts of some plants.

He went to country clubs and social functions to encourage that "God be the same to Pittsburgh as steel is to Pittsburgh." Many young couples were attracted to his preachings.

Dr. Shoemaker, who retired two years ago, was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, the Ivy Club of Princeton and the Union League of New York.

Dr. Meigs Memorial Thursday

Special to the Herald Tribune
BOSTON, Mass.

A memorial service for Dr. Joe Vincent Meigs, 72, clinical professor of gynecology emeritus at Harvard University and a leader in his field for decades, will be held Thursday at Memorial Church, Harvard Yard, Cambridge.

Dr. Meigs, who lived in Boston, died Thursday in Syracuse, N. Y. He had suffered a heart attack after making a speech in Rochester, N. Y.

The Joe Vincent Meigs Professorship in Gynecology was established at Harvard in 1962 with funds contributed over a period of seven years by his friends, colleagues, associates and former patients.

Dr. Meigs retired in 1955 as chief of staff of the Vincent Memorial Hospital and chief of the gynecological service at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

He had devoted much time and energy to research, including an intensive study concerning the surgical treatment of cancer of the cervix. Meigs' Syndrome, a disease of the ovaries, is named for him.

Dr. Meigs received his A. B. degree from Princeton University in 1915 and his M. D. from Harvard in 1919. He held honorary memberships in numerous medical societies, including the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists of London and the Svenska Lakaresallskapet of Stockholm.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Meigs; two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Courtney, of Lunenburg, Mass., and Mrs. Sarah Hobbs, of Andover, Mass.; a son, Wallace, of St. Louis, and several grandchildren.

DR. JOE V. MEIGS OF HARVARD DIES

Professor, 71, a Leader in Gynecological Research

BOSTON, Oct. 25 (AP)—Dr. Joe Vincent Meigs, clinical professor emeritus of gynecology at Harvard, died yesterday in Syracuse of a heart attack. He was 71 years old and lived in Boston.

Dr. Meigs retired in 1955 as chief of staff of the Vincent Memorial Hospital and chief of the gynecological service at Massachusetts General Hospital. He had been associated with the Harvard Medical School since 1932, devoting much time to medical education and research. His description of a benign tumor of the ovaries led to the name of Meigs's Syndrome.

He received an A.B. degree from Princeton in 1915 and his M.D. degree from Harvard in 1919.

Dr. Meigs leaves his wife, Elizabeth; two daughters, Mrs. Peter Courtney of Lunenburg and Mrs. John N. Hobbs of Andover, and a son, Wallace, of St. Louis.

Center of a Controversy

Dr. Meigs caused a stir in 1948 when he told the American College of Surgeons that endometriosis, an ailment of women leading to sterility and other disorders, was "a social phenomenon foreshadowing a decline in our civilization."

He said that endometriosis was associated with delayed marriage, contraception and delayed childbearing and that its prevalence might lead to "the eventual displacement in social dominance of healthy and intelligent people by the weak and unintelligent but fecund class."

His point was that members of the educated class often marry later in life and have fewer children than most persons of the working class. It brought accusations that he was anti-democratic, the apostle of an outmoded and class-conscious system of eugenics.

Dr. Meigs and Dr. Howard Ulfelder extended the smear technique of cancer detection that had been perfected by the late Dr. George N. Papanicolaou, who detected early uterine cancer by the study of cells from vaginal fluid. Dr. Meigs and his associate developed the technique to detect malignancy in stomach, urine and sputum fluids.

F. S. POLHEMUS, 66; RETIRED LAWYER

Descendant of Early Settler, a Protestant Leader, Dies

Special to The New York Times

PRINCETON, N. J., June 18 —Frederick Suydam Polhemus of 65 Westcott Road, a retired New York lawyer and a prominent Protestant layman, died yesterday in Princeton Hospital after a long illness. He was 66 years old.

Mr. Polhemus was a descendant of the Rev. Johannes Theodorus Polhemus, who became the first minister of the Dutch Reformed Churches in Brooklyn and Flatlands in 1654.

At tercentenary observances in New York in 1954, he presented a "cup of brotherhood" to Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Nathan Jr., a descendant of Abraham de Lucena, one of the first Jewish settlers and another passenger on the ship that brought the minister here from Europe.

Mr. Polhemus was born in Newark and educated at Newark Academy, the Hill School and Princeton, where he was graduated in 1920 after World War I duty in the Army's chemical warfare service.
